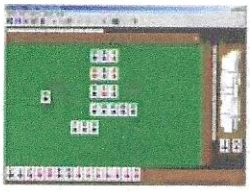
The Rummi program

Rummi (ending in -i instead of -y, and no -kub) is a program that allows you to play Tile Rummy and other variations of manipulation Rummy.

Selected screen shot



Another game, named Rozzy, with original game rules.

Features

Features of Rummi include:

- Play the computer in different levels, in a game against 1 to 3 computers players.
- Play with up to three other people over the internet or local network.
- Automatic connection with other people on the internet.
- Define your own games.
- Many different variations of game rules.
- Different sets of tiles or cards, in different sizes.
- Select different playfield themes (graphics and sounds) for each game.
- Sort your hand automatically by color, by value, or sort it yourself.
- Ask for a hint that will show you a possible move.
- Design your own cards or tiles.
- Design your own themes.

Shareware

Rummi is shareware. After installation, you are granted a 30 day trial period. If you like the program, you must pay and register.

After registration, you'll get:

- No more delay after you start the program.
- Play more games without having to restart the program.
- Working automatic connection feature, that can find other players on the internet.
- Working Undo and Redo functions.
- Option to add new players.
- Emergency exit ("boss-key").
- Unlimited free updates.

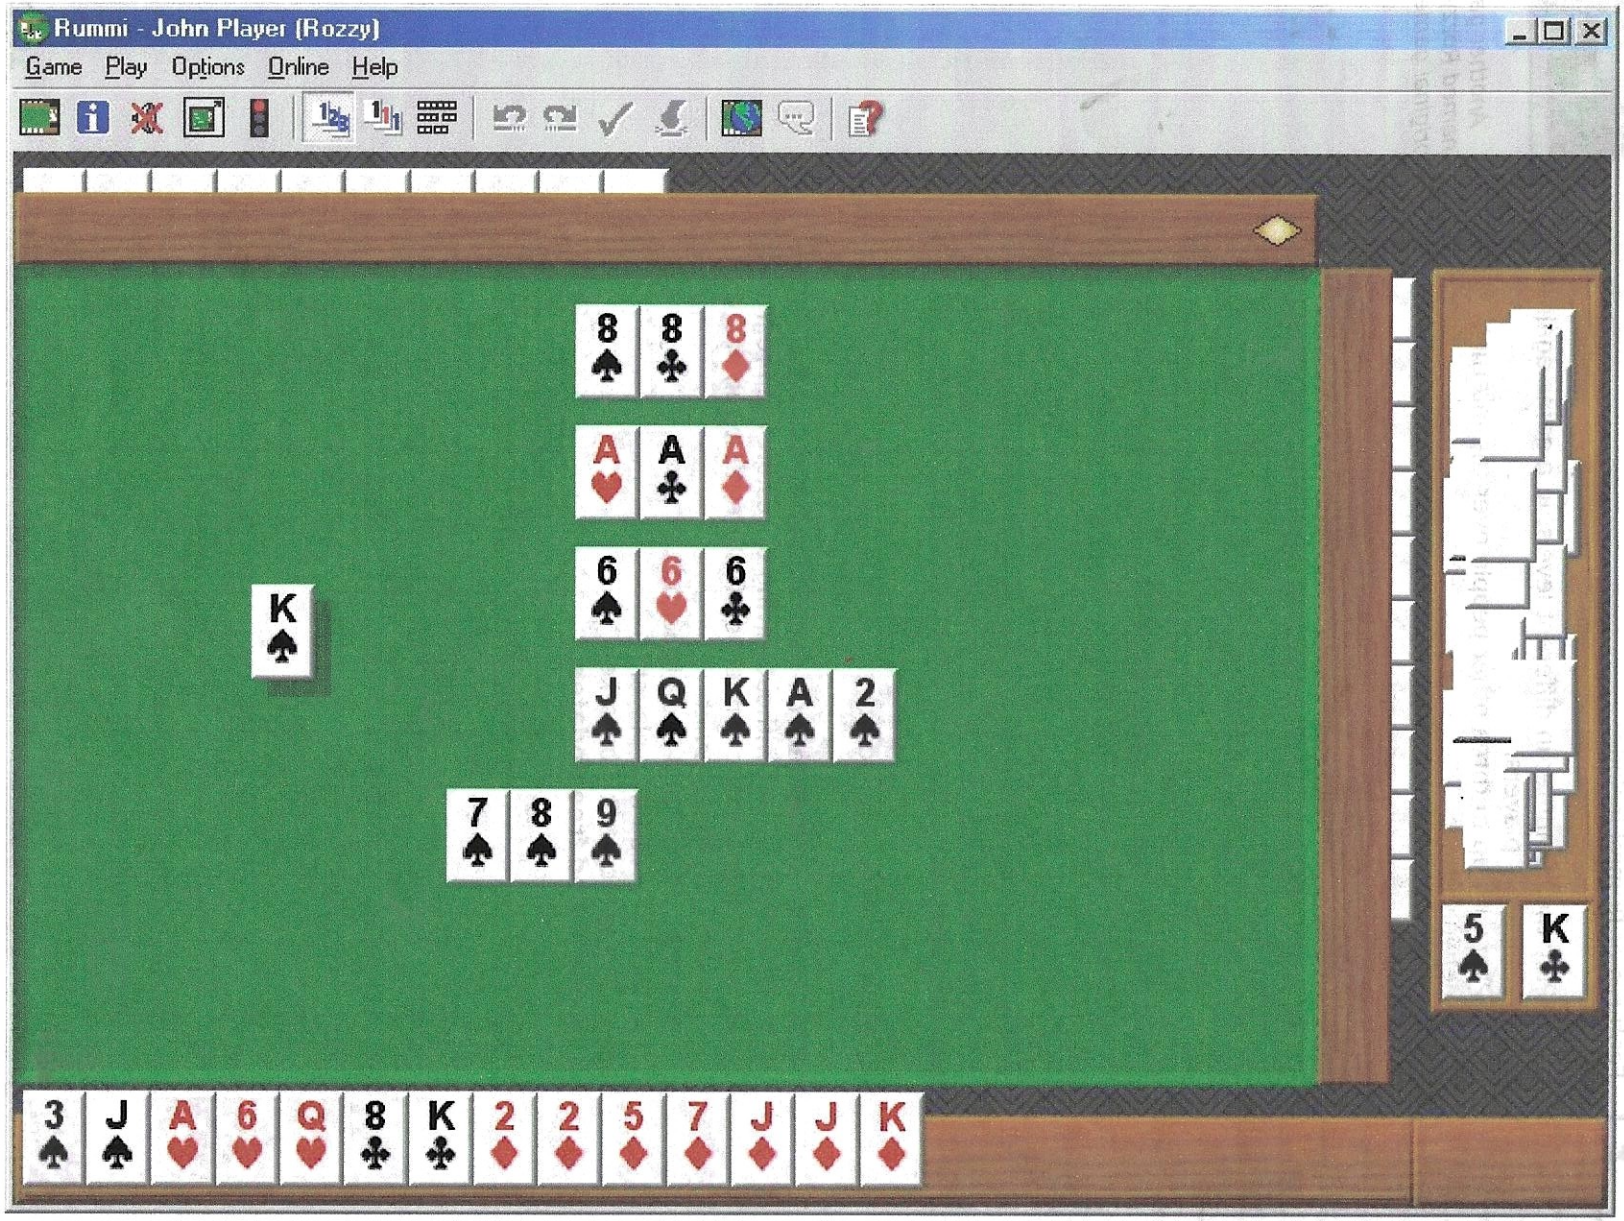
Another game, named Rozzy, played with tiles with card colors. Notice the original rules: the Ace is used to wrap from King to Two (in the Spades group of J-Q-K-A-2), and this game uses two spare tiles (at the right below the stock). Rummi features many game rule options.



A game of Tile Rummy with the standard tiles. Notice how two tiles are moved together; you can pick up more tiles or even entire groups. In this game, a timer is used, as you can see by the hourglass in the bottom left corner.

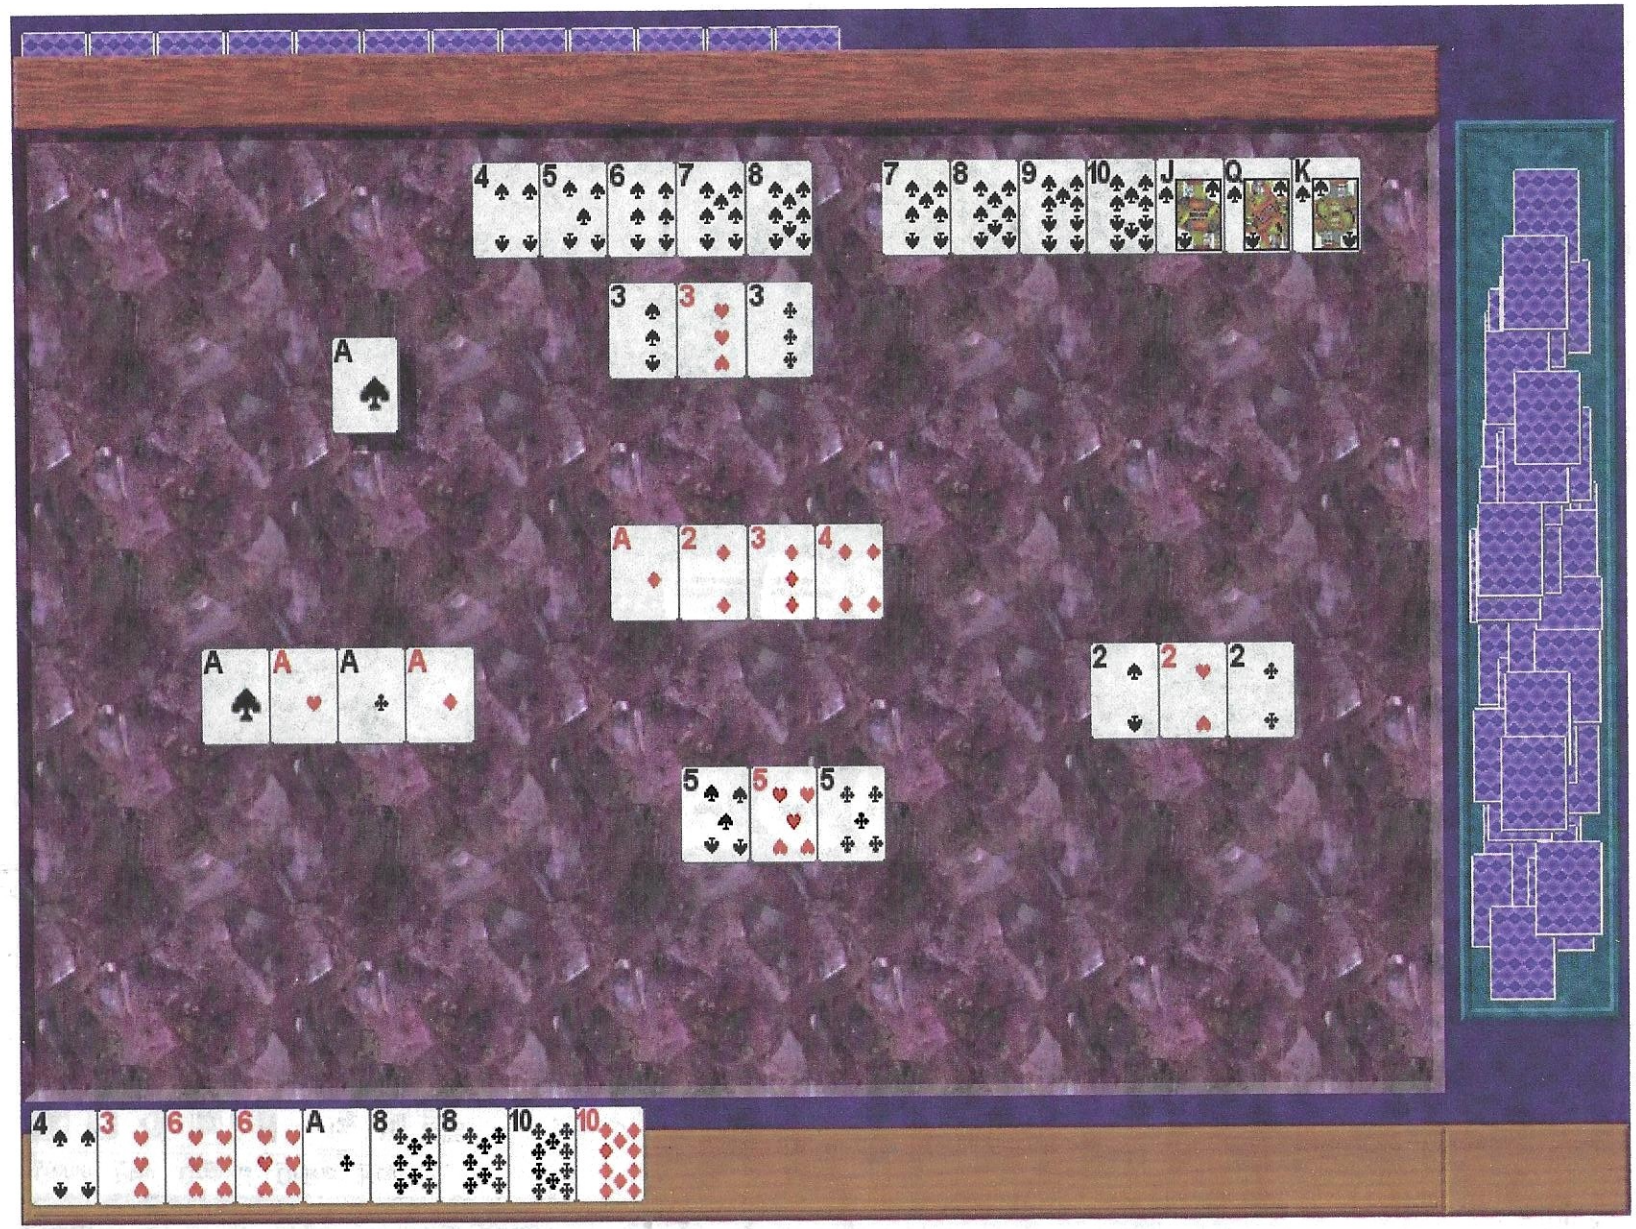
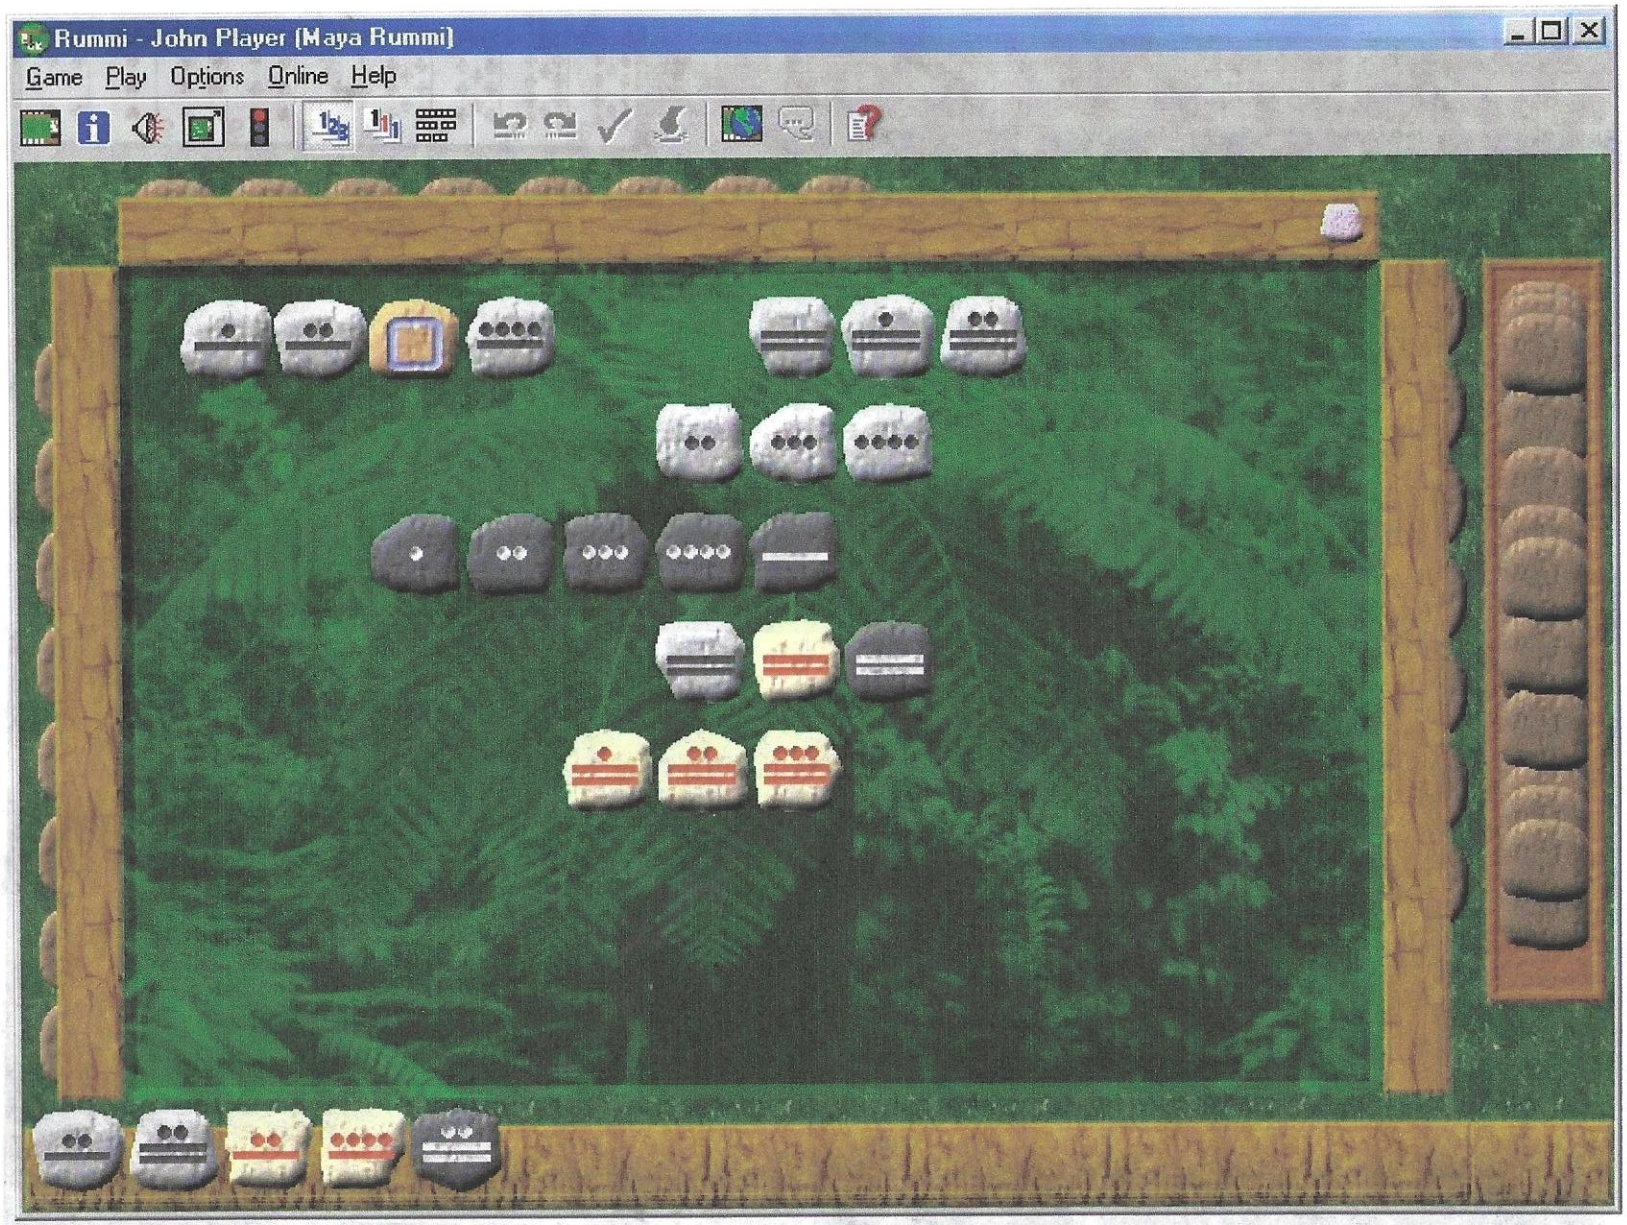
Your turn. Play, or end your turn.

This screen shot shows the beautiful wooden theme and wooden tiles.
It also shows how you can sort tiles in your hand yourself, and that your hand is not confined to using one row.

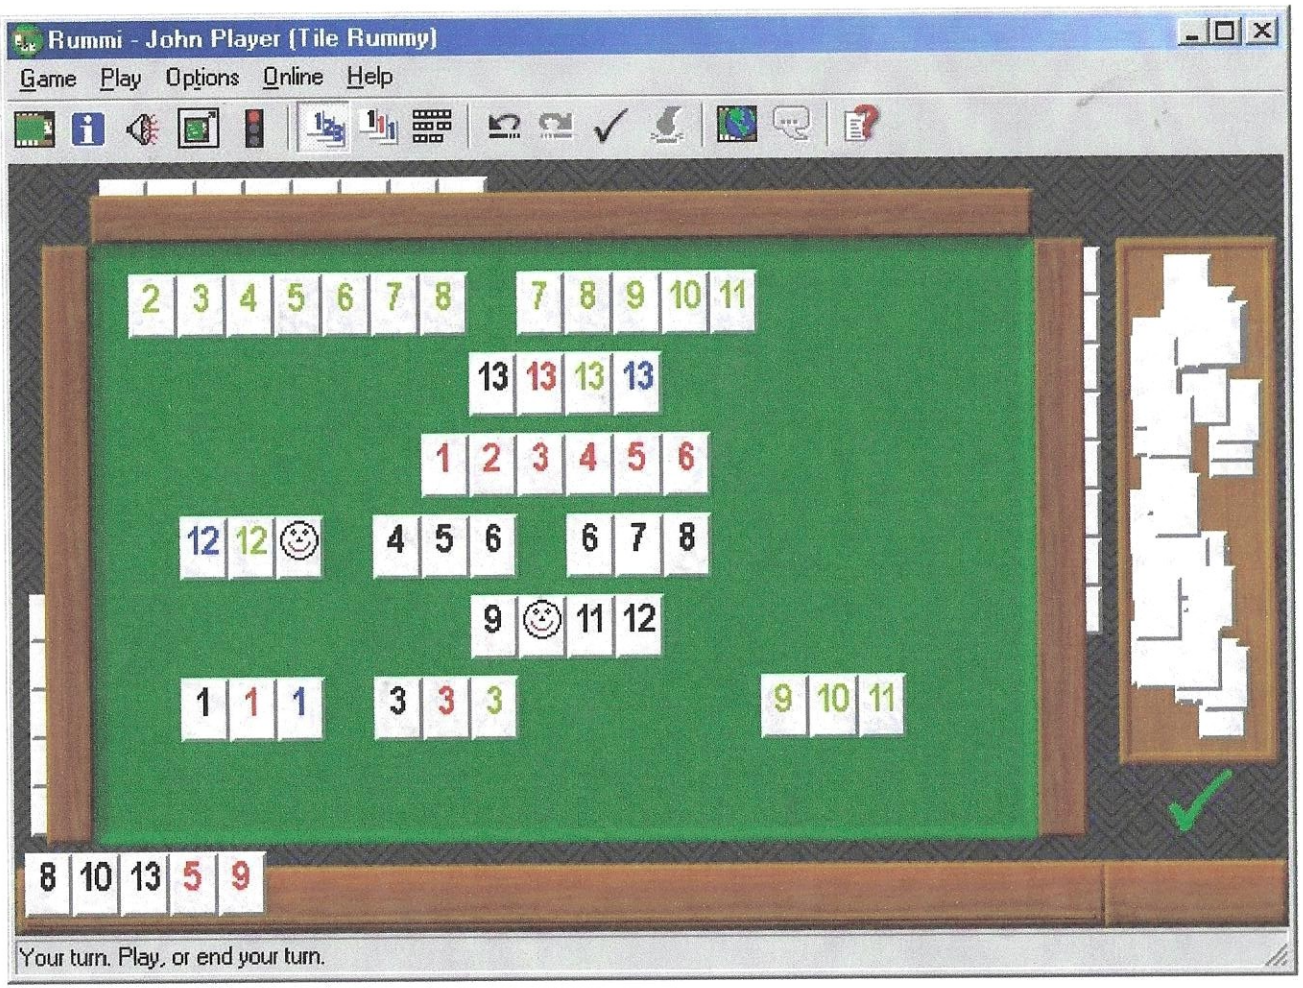
This game of Shanghai is played with cards instead of tiles. Also notice that it uses another theme, that is other graphics. This screen shot was made in full screen mode, where the playing area fills the entire screen, without window borders, menus or tool bar.



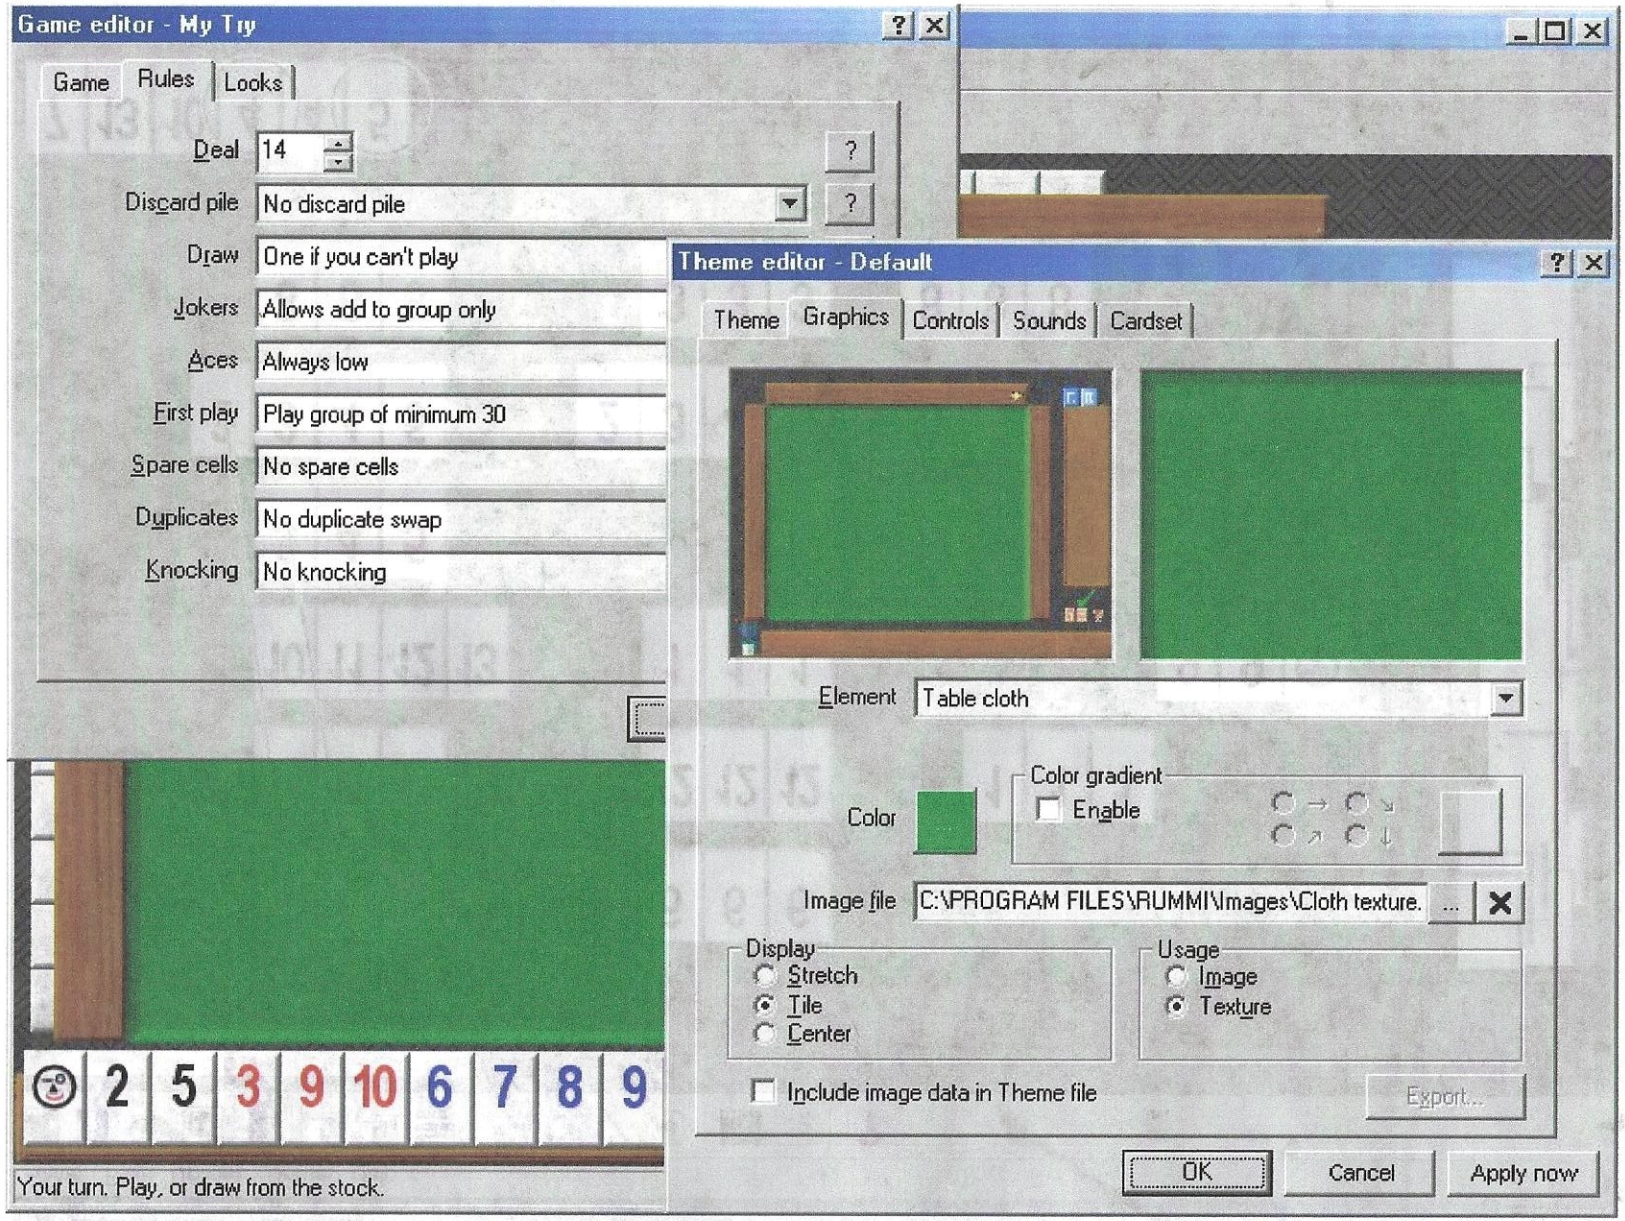
Tiles or cards can have any shape. How about this alledged ancient Central American game of Maya Rummi played with pebbles? Maya numbers are easy: each dot counts as one, each bar as five.



The old small tiles, known from version 1.0 of the program, are still available for users with smaller desktops. You can change the card or tile set you are using while you are playing the game.



In this screen shot you see two of Rummi's editor windows.
First, the Game editor where you can define the rules and looks of your own games.
Second, the Theme editor where you can create your own themes using your own colors, graphics, controls and sounds.



You can ask the program to give you a hint - ideal for learning the game! The suggested move is indicated by arrows and circle marks.
